Yearly Médiamat 2020

From December 30th 2019 to January 3rd 2021

TV audience measurement

Features of Médiamat

Médiamat, the benchmark in television audience measurement in France, takes into consideration audiences of programmes watched at home on TV and audiences outside of the home and on the move regardless of the screen: television, computer, smartphone, tablet.

On 28th December 2020, the Médiamat panel comprised 11,502 individuals aged 4 years and older living in 5,000 households equipped with an audience meter in each television set at home. This panel is representative of individuals residing in mainland France having a TV set in their main residence. Audiences outside the home and on the move are measured thanks to a panel of individuals who carry with them a miniature audience meter as they go about their daily activities. Today, there are about 4,500 panellists aged 15 years and older and equipped with a television set.

Calculation features and audience indicators

Viewing Time per Individual (VTI) in minutes: average time spent viewing programmes broadcasted by TV channels by all individuals in the population studied.

Audience share in percentage: share that represents the viewing time for a channel over the total viewing time for television media. For Canal +, the results have been calculated across the entire broadcast period, whether the broadcast was scrambled or unscrambled.

Monthly coverage: number of individuals who had at least one contact of 10 consecutive seconds with the channel over the month.

Audience in Viewing days: total audiences of programmes viewed live, time-shifted and on catch-up on a given day, regardless of the original live broadcast date of the programmes caught up with.

Audience share in percentage: share that represents the viewing time for a channel over the total viewing time for television media.
